

AIPRO is excited to announce the formation of the Arkansas Energy Political Action Committee (PAC). This newly created entity will provide AIPRO and our industry the opportunity to put meaningful support behind candidates for state office (non-federal) who best represent our interests. Arkansas law now prohibits businesses and corporations from direct contributions to campaigns. However, such entities can contribute to state-registered political action committees.

Before AIPRO releases any funds to a candidate or campaign, the PAC's five trustees (three AIPRO officers, chairman of our Government Affairs Committee and Executive Director) will discuss and vet candidates for possible support. PAC funds may also support campaigns for or against Constitutional amendments, initiated actions or other ballot measures.

To make the PAC successful and significant, we need the support of our members, including individuals, businesses and corporations, who can make direct contributions to this joint effort. Although PAC contributions are not tax deductible, individual donors can receive a $50-per-person or $100-per-couple tax credit on their Arkansas income tax return. AEPAC can accept up to $5,000 from any single entity/individual per election, i.e. primary and general election.
