

The Arkansas Energy Education Foundation (AEEF) promotes the oil and natural gas industry. Thanks to generous contributions from companies, organizations and individuals who support this mission, foundation programs have reached thousands of Arkansans through civic club presentations, hundreds of educators through the Teacher Energy Education Workshop and education conference presentations, and thousands of school children through Arkansas Energy Rocks! classroom visits and www.arkansasenergyrocks.com website.

Arkansas Energy Rocks! is an invaluable resource for my students. The website is a place where students turn to learn more about energy and geology. It has so many interactive elements that keep my kids challenged and engaged. Paige's role as a guest speaker also provides my students with a unique perspective of the oil and natural gas industry that they can only get from an expert. She makes it real for the kids and is able to answer questions.

The South Arkansas producers enjoyed the time we had to share our industry with our Arkansas educators at the Teacher Energy Education Workshop. I am already looking forward to the next one.
